

I agree with Michael Powell that the US media is the best in the world for its programming and diversity.

This is precisely the argument against sweeping changes in media ownership regulation at this time.

I find Mr. Powell's arrogance in his ability to predict the long reaching effects astonishing when at the very least, opinions are extremely divided on this issue.

What could be termed a media blackout on this issue should certainly concern the public.

If any reasonable amount of media attention were given to this issue this issue would never see the light of day.
